

A group of marathon runners in various colored singlets and shorts are running on a wide, paved street in Pyongyang, North Korea. In the background, a large, classical-style archway with a central opening is visible, along with other buildings and a clear sky. The runners are in motion, with some wearing bib numbers like 304 and 314.

A group of runners in various colored singlets and shorts are running on a paved street. In the foreground, a police officer in a dark uniform and cap stands with his back to the camera, looking towards the runners. The background shows a light-colored building with several windows. The scene is brightly lit, suggesting a sunny day.
